Note: From 1961-1973, Hondo (nom de plume, or alias, or AKA Peter Cedarstacker) wrote a social satire column for the Comfort News. The fictional town of Cedar Creek and all of its characters eventually became the real town of Luckenbach and all of its characters (and Luckenbach has some real characters!) The MOON reserves a special corner for Peter Cedarstacker, Writer, as a corner of wit and human insight for us today.

CEDAR CREEK CLIPPINGS

Wednesday of this week I came home from the Post Office-beer joint where I sharpen scissors every Wed. and found Mama standin' on the front porch with tears on her face. And still tearin'. I asked her, "Where's he at?" Figgerin' little Jay had blowed a bridge up or robbed a bank. She said it wasn't that. For the first time since we've had little Jay Elbie he kissed her and called her Mama. Now she wants to change his name from Jay Elbie to ours and get him a foreign car for Christmas. That's a woman. It kinda made me feel a little resourceful and homogenized my own self. I wanted to do somethin' for him to prove I didn't hate him anymore. He was under the house huntin' doodlebugs, my way, when I found him.

I took him to the creek to teach him how to skip rocks on the water. He chased an armadillo deep into the forest and I followed. As we rested on a big limestone rock Jay asked, "What's pollution?" "Yikes!" I thought and tried to answer him. "It's a mess of stuff floatin' 'round in the water, on the earth and in the air. People make it, animals in the woods don't and trees sop it up. We make carbon dioxide and trees breathe it. Trees breathe out oxygen for us to run fast and jump high. Without trees we'd be up to our knees in bad breath." I could tell he was impressed with my rock-skippin' instructions and lecture on trees and pollution by the way he took my hand in his little dirty armadillo-chasin' hand and held it all the way home.

It took us 'till dark because every tree we passed he patted it, looked up at its giant branches and said, "Thank you."
